My wife Tami and I live on a farm in Santa Ynez, and we just finished building a house on the Snake River in Idaho. We have two adorable grandkids, and life is good. After I "retired" many years ago, I accidentally started a new company supplying internet wirelessly to the Santa Ynez Valley. We now serve more than 1000 devices from a dozen hilltops, complete with solar/LifePo4 and remote generators. It has been a blast, and now I'm slowly turning over the reins to my son-in-law.

Still writing software too, most recently a few apps for the iPhone in Swift. I am playing with Apple's Vision Pro to see if I can come up with a good app for it. If you think of a killer app for it, let me know. The best one I've seen so far is Jig - you can walk/crawl around a virtual object - it looks so real you try to touch it.
